Two Witnesses Examined and a Recess Taken-Engineer Dempsey's Interesting Story,

One of the Victims Partially Indentified by Letters in His Possession-The Other Unknown.

The bodies of the three unfortunate victims of Tuesday night's railroad accident were viewed by hundreds of people yesterday in the Helena Undertaking company's Fireman Green is the only one identified, but letters found on the young man who was stealing a ride on the passenger train make it probable that his name is B. T. Hinckey or Hiffchey. One letter was Hinckey or Hirchey. One letter was 2, by Tschaikowsky, was most exquisitely dated Honey Grove, Fananco, Texas, Aug. 25, 1888, signed by W. B. Hinckey, and addressed to his brother. In one place it said: "There is lots of cotton to pick down here; how is it up your way?" It is also possible that he is a married man, or has a sister, as the letter said in one or has a sister, as the letter said in one place; "Tell Matt if she will write I will send her one of my pictures." The body is that of a man of dark complexion, black send her one of my pictures." The body is that of a man of dark complexion, black hair, black eyes, incipient mustache, weight about 140 pounds and medium height, and apparently 24 or 25 years of age.

There was no possible trace of identity found on the other body, that of a rather heavy set man, and about 27 years old, with heavy mustache.

A number of witnesses were on hand at noon who viewed the remains, and Acting Coroner J. G. Sanders began the inquest.

J. J. Dempsey was the first witness called. He said he resided at Livingston, was a locomotive engineer and ran passenger trains Nos. I and 2 on the Northern Pacitic. He was at Prickly Pear Junction at the time of the accident. He got orders at Helena at 7:20 P. M. to go to the junction and that the freight train had five minutes of their time in order to get to the junction and that the freight train had five minutes of their time in order to get to the junction and that the freight train had five minutes of their time in order to get to the junction and that the freight train had five minutes of their time in order to get to the junction and that the freight train had five minutes of their time in order to get to the junction and that the scaled. As he passed over the knell he could see the freight train on the main line of the wickes branch. His train was to go through to St. Paul and stop at Prickly Pear only when flagged; all trains stop there unless they get a clearance. He had a clearance and did not have to stop, and was running on the conductor pulled his air signal to stop at the station. The signal was answered with two short blasts of the whists so he the conductor pulled his air signal to stop at the station. The signal was answered with two short blasts of the whistle so he Continuing Mr. Dempsey said: "I saw a man up along the track; I applied the brakes and slowed down, expecting the man to flag me. He stepped down off the track and did not flag me. I saw the green light at the switch, and could see from the time that I pitched over the knoll between the junction and here. I could see the freight close to the main line, but of course when I saw the green light I released the when I saw the green light I released the brakes to let the train pull up to the depot. I saw a man at the switch and if the red light had been in place of the green I would have known that the track was not clear. The red light should have been there under the circumstances. As soon neared the switch the rays of the headlight showed the switch was thrown for the side track. At that time one man was at the switch and another a short dis-

He then told the jury the condition of the track and of finding the victims.

Continuing he said: "The man at the switch I learned was the night operator."

The passenger elevator in the Pittsburg block is now running. It is the second one to be started in Helena.

Now that the election is over, the motor line company will again urge upon the council their request for a turnout on Sixth avenue. Continuing he said: "The man at the switch I learned was the night operator. He was down there, he said, to put the switch lights on; the switch lights should have been on before that. He told me he had not quite got to the switch, and told others he was fixing the switch light. His name is Short. The other man near the switch was Henniey. I could not tell whether the green light was on the switch or held by some one."

Robert R. Anderson, of Bozeman, engineer of the freight train No. 15, was next called. He had arrived at the junction at called. He had arrived at the junction at 7:30 p. m., and had his train on the west leg of the Y. Before backing onto the Y. Brakeman Humphries went ahead to flag the passenger train. "I backed up and noticed a man at the switch; there was another man standing close, but don't know who he was. While on the Y. I stepped off to oil my engine, and wast just oiling the left side when I heard a noise, and looking up saw a train approaching and it was only three car lengths away from me. I had just time to make a couple of seps when they struck our engine. I had Brakeman Humphries out to protect my train and also to look after the switch. He was the flagman sent out. I do not know where he was at the time the passenger train came in. The switch

The tanks of the three engines are pretty badly mashed, but the machinery appears to be all right. The tank of the boiler of the passenger engine went right up to the boiler head. The other tanks, though mashed, were not driven into the engines. One freight and a mail car were the only cars damaged.

The Medical Examiners.

The Board of Medical Examiners sat in executive session all day yesterday at the city council chamber and transacted a great deal of business in executive session and investigated a number of diplomas. A few local practitioners applied for certificates and their diplomas were investigated but no definite action taken. The board adjourned to meet in this city again Thurs-day, April 18, at which time it is desired that all graduates in medicine practicing in Montana shall present their diplomas for investigation. All persons practicing without diplomas are required by law to present themselves before the beard for ex-amination.

Nefariousness.

For some time past advertisements have appeared in the Helena papers of the European Bond and Exchange company, of Chicago, 111., sole and legally incorporated firm for the sale of these bonds. The advertisement states that there are ten drawings annually without any loss of European premium bonds, prizes of $200,-000, $100,000 and $50,000. The advertisement says:

"The sales of these bonds is in accord-A feature of the concert was the trio for ance with the United States laws and must not be confounded with any lottery scheme. Each bond at least must be re-deemed with its full nominal value and the holder has the chance to draw prizes up to $200,000,

The Montana agent, William Jaretzsky, whose office is in Helena, has not been idle since he came here. A number of persons not only in this city, but over the territory, have invested in the scheme, and a goodi have invested in the scheme, and a goodly number of shekels have been poured into the treasury. That the Montana agent is really an agent of the Chicago firm is apparent, not from the advertisement only, but from the fact that a bill presented to the Helena agent for collection was for-warded to the Chicago office.

DEFRAUDED A WIDOW. From late developments it is evident that the European Bond and Exchange com-pany are adroit swindlers. The leading man in the company, the grand mogul of them all, Edward Zeisler, was recently ar-rested in Chicago, but managed to effect them all, Edward Zeisler, was recently arrested in Chicago, but managed to effect his escape. Zeisler has offices at No. 25 East Fourteenth street, New York city, and Nos. 93 and 95 Fifth avenue, Chicago. Last Saturday John J. Fahey, a deputy sheriff of Scranton, Penn., arrived in Chicago with a requisition for the arrest of Zeisler, who is charged with having defrauded a widow named Elizabeth Winters out of $150. She was induced to invest $400 in the Zeisler bonds. She purchased four certificates each at $105.

After she paid the first $105 on the first certificate Edward Zeisler came to her with his agent, Max Oppenhelmer. He took his agent aside and told him that the widow did not know the difference between an Italian and Hungarian bond, so he would try and obtain the certificate and tween an Italian and Hungarian bond, so he would try and obtain the certificate and receipts given by the European Bond company, for which she had paid $105, and give her the Italian bond, which was a difference of $28. All the bonds together were only worth $38, and the widow received for her $105 the sum of $10. Zeisler insisted upon her paying further on the other certificates, $60 each, which she did, but finding she was swindled refused to pay any more and so lost $150.

Max Oppenheimer, who was examined under oath by Alderman Roesler, of Scranton, stated that he advised and requested Zeisler not to defraud the poor widow, but he said: "I know my business. I have done it often, and never got caught. Why should I be afraid now?" For this reason alone a requisition was granted by Governor Beaver for stealing and carrying away.

sold yesterday by Porter, Muth & Cox for $5,000. central hotel. They had seventy new archaracters yesterday and charged them nor Beaver for stealing and carrying away from the said Elizabeth Winters, receipts and certificates so that he might give her different bonds from those she purchased, which, as stated above, are worth hardly anything. OTHER CASES. The Chicago Herald says that in addition to this there are nearly seventy similar cases committed in Scranton and throughout Pennsylvania. There are also many in Nebraska, principally in Omaha, where The city scavenger was around yester-day, and none too soon, as the tomato can and old shoe which bloom in the spring Zeisler made it his particular aim to get he best of German bankers, who now threaten to do him up if he appears there Legitimate European bonds, not the Zeisler ones, are the same as United States bonds, and are given out by different foreign govhave commenced suit agains Gilman Riggs to foreclose a mechanics' lien filed Decem-ber II, 1888, against lot 8, block 9, East ernments, the interest being paid by pre miums and the capital remaining always the same. An old case was brought to light against Zeisier recently. A poor woman named Christina Johnson, of Hage-wisch, Ill., invested her last dollar in these bonds. She paid $45, and was eventually swindled out of that sum without getting a cent in return. She swore out a warrant before Justice R. H. White in August last. Zeis-ier was arrested, and when he appeared efore the justice was put under $300 bonds out the case has never come to final trial A similar case occurred not long ago, the complainant being Max Heiller, of Kensington, Iil. He swore out a warrant against Zeisler tor swindling, and that worthy was again placed under bonds, but nothing further has been heard of it. When Zeisler was arrested he was about to board the train for Denver with his son and book keepers, to enlarge his operations in Col-orado. It is well known that Zeisler is wanted by a great many people he has duped, and there are several charges hanging over him in Chicago courts. THE SCHEME. Zeisler's scheme as explained by one who has taken the pains to investigate is to sell bonds in lots of four for $105, one of hem being an Austro-Hungarian imperia ond and the other three Red Cross bonds The face value of these bonds is between $33 and $37, and every certificate bears on the face of it that the bonds are redeema-ble at their face value. For these bonds the purchasers pay monthly installments of $5 each, with an alleged chance of winning a prize when the lotteries are drawn, which is every month. The purchaser never really knows what the actual face value by Miss Clarke to represent the west side when Mr. Burton resigned, and has since remained on the board presumably representing that part of the city. If Mr. Bullard is selected, or some other good business man who will look after and give the school finances better attention than they have had and reverse the continuation of really knows what the actual face value of the bonds are, for if he asks he is informed they are fluctuating. The agents in the employ of the company tell every purchas-er that they get back the $105 paid for the so-called Zeisler bonds, but as it will ap-pear it has never yet happened that they received the original bond they purchased. Of course, if the man sells these bonds he can get no more for them than $37, or $39 at the outside, if he had the real one. have had, and prevent the continuation of the present combination controlling our schools to their disadvantage there will he can get no more for them than $37, or $39 at the outside, if he had the real one.

The company enforces monthly paypayments by letters and agents whom they send all over the United States to make collections, and get out of a man from $85 to $90. Then they stop sending no ice when payments are due, and this makes the purchaser break his contract by not paying what is due on time, and in this not paying what is due on time, and in this way the purchaser loses every dollar he pays and he does not get back a cent of all the money he paid in. The company practices mostly on Germans and all foreigners, and on widows who have a few dollars, giving them the idea that they only lose the interest and will get back the full amount they paid. nated as committees at the New Englandand Mrs. C. ANOTHER SWINDLE. Besides, there is another trick which should be exposed, and for which the agents of Zeisier as well as the company could be held responsible. They have printed on their certificates that the Hungarian Red Cross bonds are redeemed in 1892, which is only twelve drawings from today when in fact these bonds are reo-day, when, in fact, these bonds are re-deemed in 1902, as stated in the original bond. One Italian Red Cross bond is redeemed in 1937, while they claim and guar antee that these bonds are redeemed in 1897. In this way the purchaser is made to believe that he gets his money back in a short while, and only takes a chance on his interest. The company has sent over the whole United States drawing lists claiming certain parties have won one hun-dred or two hundred. dred or two hundred thousand, not specifying the amounts whether dollars or cents. Of course, it was never known up to this date that this house ever paid anything to any one of all their customers. Should the customers of these swindling institutions pay their $105$ they never institutions pay their $105, they never feel inclined to give them the right bonds as stated on the certificate, but they take the Austro-Hungarian Imperial bond and replace it with a Barletta bond, which is worth a fifth of the value of the Austro-Hungarian one that the austro-hungarian one that the Hungarian one that the purchaser bought and paid for.

It seems that the eastern states have been worked pretty thoroughly, and as their vic-tims began to demand their money back and finding it not forthcoming made it so unpleasant that the schemers had to seek other fields, and just now the northwest promises the most inviting harvest. The loss of the German war ships in the recent agents in Montana, though here but ashort hurricane at Apia, said it was the duty of time, have already succeeded in duping quite a number. The expose is timely.
